

Wonderful Memories

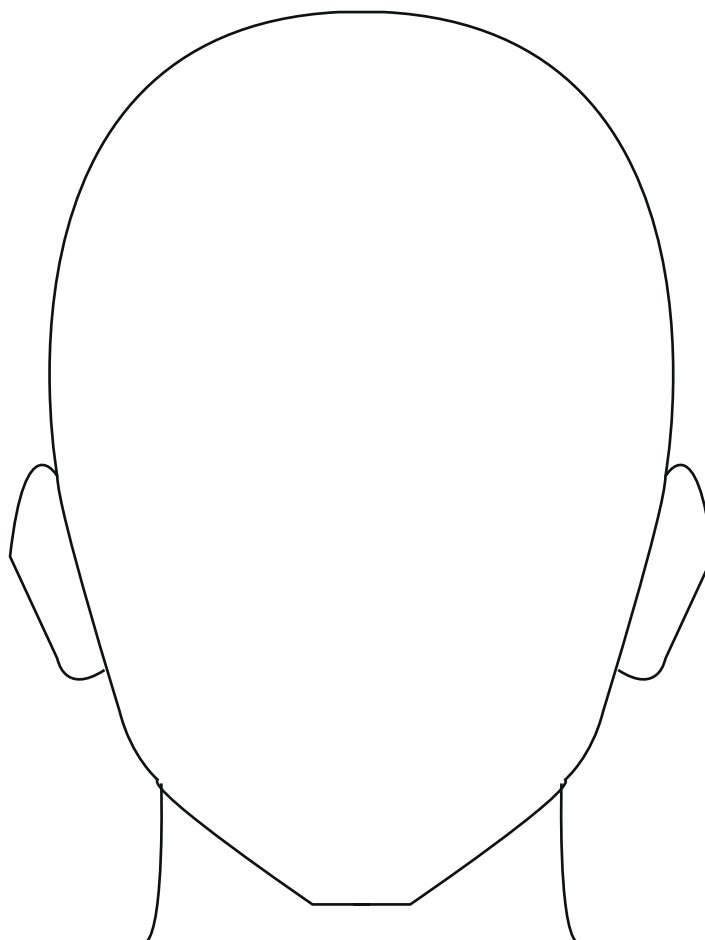

Amazing Fact

There is a website called the Museum of Endangered Sounds which keeps a record of sounds we would otherwise no longer hear!

Sounds, along with sights and smells, all evoke strong memories. This is because the same part of our brain that is in charge of processing our senses is also in charge of storing our memories.

Challenge

On the silhouette below, sketch, label and describe the sights, sounds and smells which evoke strong memories for you.

You could also try to find out:

- why the British Library is worried about losing sounds forever;
- what sounds we may never be able to hear again;
- how sounds can trigger memories;
- which sounds we might hear more of in future.
